The British are fond of understatement and self-deprecation. You might hear 'It's rather warm,' when in fact the temperatures are over 40 degrees, and a best-selling writer might say 'I've had some success,' also reflecting the traditional embarrassment with success. This apparent humility is approved of by fellow British people, and many comedians and films use understatement, self-deprecation and extreme politeness as a source of word play comedy.

The British people are good at using understatement in jokes because .....

الحل والشرح

1 A) web hosting Web hosting is the service of serving and maintaining files for websites, as in the sentence.

2 A) Sawsan wishes she had known about the previous meeting with the staff. She did not know about the meeting, a regret about the past. So 'wishes' is followed by the past perfect: she had known.

3 A) desalinate After 'to' we need the base verb. 'Desalinate' means to remove salt from water. Desalination is a noun.

4 B) meeting After 'a long' a noun is needed, and a long meeting is something you can have before solving a problem. Secure is not a noun here.

5 A) blog A blog is a regularly updated personal website or web page, usually in an informal style, which matches the definition.

6 B) eating 'Stop' + gerund means to no longer do something, as in 'I stopped drinking fizzy drinks'. So Ahmed stopped eating junk food. 'Stop to eat' would mean stopping in order to eat.

7 A) seminars Seminars are university teaching groups where students discuss a subject freely. References, pensions and extractions have other meanings.

8 A) impossible to realise A pipe dream is a hope that will probably never come true, so it means impossible to realise. The text says it will 'remain' so for most people.

9 D) Husam wishes that he had been careful with his homework. He should have been more careful but was not, so he regrets the past: wish + past perfect, 'had been careful'.

10 A) blow a fuse To blow a fuse means to get very angry. Cut out for means suited to, land in your lap means come easily, and stuck in a rut means in a boring routine.

11 B) interpret To interpret means to translate speech from one language to another, which suits someone fluent in several languages. Inherit, inoculate and intern have different meanings.

12 C) when 'When' links two times: when school finishes. 'Unless' and 'if not' would change the meaning, and 'even if' does not fit.

13 A) , / , / . A comma follows the phrase 'In my spare time', another comma comes before 'and', and the sentence ends with a full stop because it is a statement.

14 C) Overall, this experience The book's list for concluding a report is 'All in all' and 'Overall, this experience'. The other options signal the purpose of a report, which belongs in the introduction.

15 B) recommendation A recommendation is advice to do something, so a committee's recommendation to hire a director fits. Composition, calculation and circulation do not mean a suggestion.

16 B) they value humility. The passage says the apparent humility is approved of by fellow British people, and comedians use understatement and self-deprecation for comedy. So they use understatement in jokes because they value humility.

17 A) conceited Conceited means 'excessively proud and vain', which fits someone who is constantly telling people how great they are. Pushy, defensive and hypocritical describe other behaviour.
