5A Reading and Vocabulary: Solving the Mystery of Nature’s Illusions

12 وزارة ٢٠٢٦ العام

I think a lot of people are really interested in optical illusions. However, it left me feeling underwhelmed. As they had chosen the most famous ones, I'd already seen them numerous times. I mean, who hasn't seen the Northern Lights in Iceland by now? I also felt that the elaborate explanations about how the illusions worked were a little patronising and treated the audience as if they were children. The writer felt disappointed because .....

A) a lot of people are interested in optical illusions.	B) the illusions were too difficult to understand by the audience.
C) he had already seen the illusions many times before.	D) he hasn't seen the Northern Lights in Iceland.

الحل والشرح

1 D) Before my children went on a picnic, they had bought the needed equipment. Buying the equipment came first, so it takes the Past Perfect (had bought) and the picnic takes the simple past (went). The book uses the Past Perfect for the earlier action.

2 D) will be organising 'This time next year' points to something in progress at a point in the future, which is the Future Continuous: will be + -ing. So 'will be organising'. The passive forms do not fit, because volunteers do the organising.

3 C) would have heard The if-clause 'had listened' is Past Perfect, so this is the Third Conditional and the result needs 'would have + past participle': 'we would have heard the news'.

4 A) strike up a conversation To strike up a conversation means to start talking to someone, and commenting on the weather is a way to do that. 'Pay a complaint' is not an English collocation.

5 C) tongue-in-cheek 'Tongue-in-cheek' means not intended to be serious, so a tongue-in-cheek comment is not a real criticism. Mediocre, jaw-dropping and gimmicky do not mean that.

6 D) annoying typical behaviour The book lists 'will' for typical behaviour that is irritating, as in 'He will leave his schoolbag on the floor'. So 'Najwa will keep leaving the lights on' shows annoying typical behaviour.

7 D) Whatever 'Whatever' means anything that or no matter what, so 'No matter what he says' becomes 'Whatever he says'. Whoever and whenever change the meaning.

8 C) used to spend The book's examples show 'used to' followed by the base verb for the past: 'I used to be a midnight snacker', 'I used to call my grandmother every night'. So 'At our old house I used to spend a lot of time with my friends' is correct; the other options (use to, wouldn't spend, don't use to) do not have that form or meaning.

9 A) immerse The sentence uses "love to go ... and immerse", so the second verb is the base form after to, as in the book's "completely immerse yourself in natural surroundings".

10 C) play it by ear To play it by ear means to decide what to do as things happen, which fits not having made a decision yet. Cold feet means fear before doing something.

11 B) had switched on The result clause 'would not have fallen' shows an imaginary situation in the past, the Third Conditional: if + past perfect, would have + past participle. So the if-clause needs 'had switched on'.

12 C) he had already seen the illusions many times before. The writer says the illusions chosen were the most famous ones and 'I'd already seen them numerous times', so the disappointment came from having seen them many times before.

13 D) hopes 'Raise hopes that...' takes a that-clause: progress raised hopes that current sources will be replaced. Eyebrows and questions do not fit that clause, and dreams is not the usual verb partner.

14 C) introduction In the book's model proposal, 'The purpose of this proposal is to ...' opens the Introduction section. It states the aim, so it is not for conclusion or recommendations.
